LYMEN

Old Lyme High School

Old Lyme,

Connecticut

Member of Connecticut Scholastic Press Association

Foreword

A blazing gold radiance bursts forth with the rising of the sun -- high school students break away from the mist of childhood and make their appearance as individuals, enlightened with new knowledge. Graduation, as the climax of this phase of their learning, is symbolized by the crimson brilliance of a sunset, ending a day which will soon be followed by another sunrise and a new and independent life.

Mrs. Maddocks

Mr. Barnes

Miss Sanford

Mr. Norris

The 1965 LYMEN staff wishes to thank Mr. Barnes for his patience and time in helping with the yearbook's photography, Miss Sanford for the use of her typing room and answers to our questions during the advisor's absence, and Mrs. Maddocks for her willingness to put down her work to look up senior middle names, lend ink pads, help with the accounting of the class treasury and various other requests. We especially thank Mr. Norris, who spent many afternoons answering questions, proofreading, supplying new ideas, encouraging us while the dreaded deadlines closed in upon half-written pages, and who constantly reminded us that whatever we printed should be fresh, interesting, and well-written.

To Our Parents

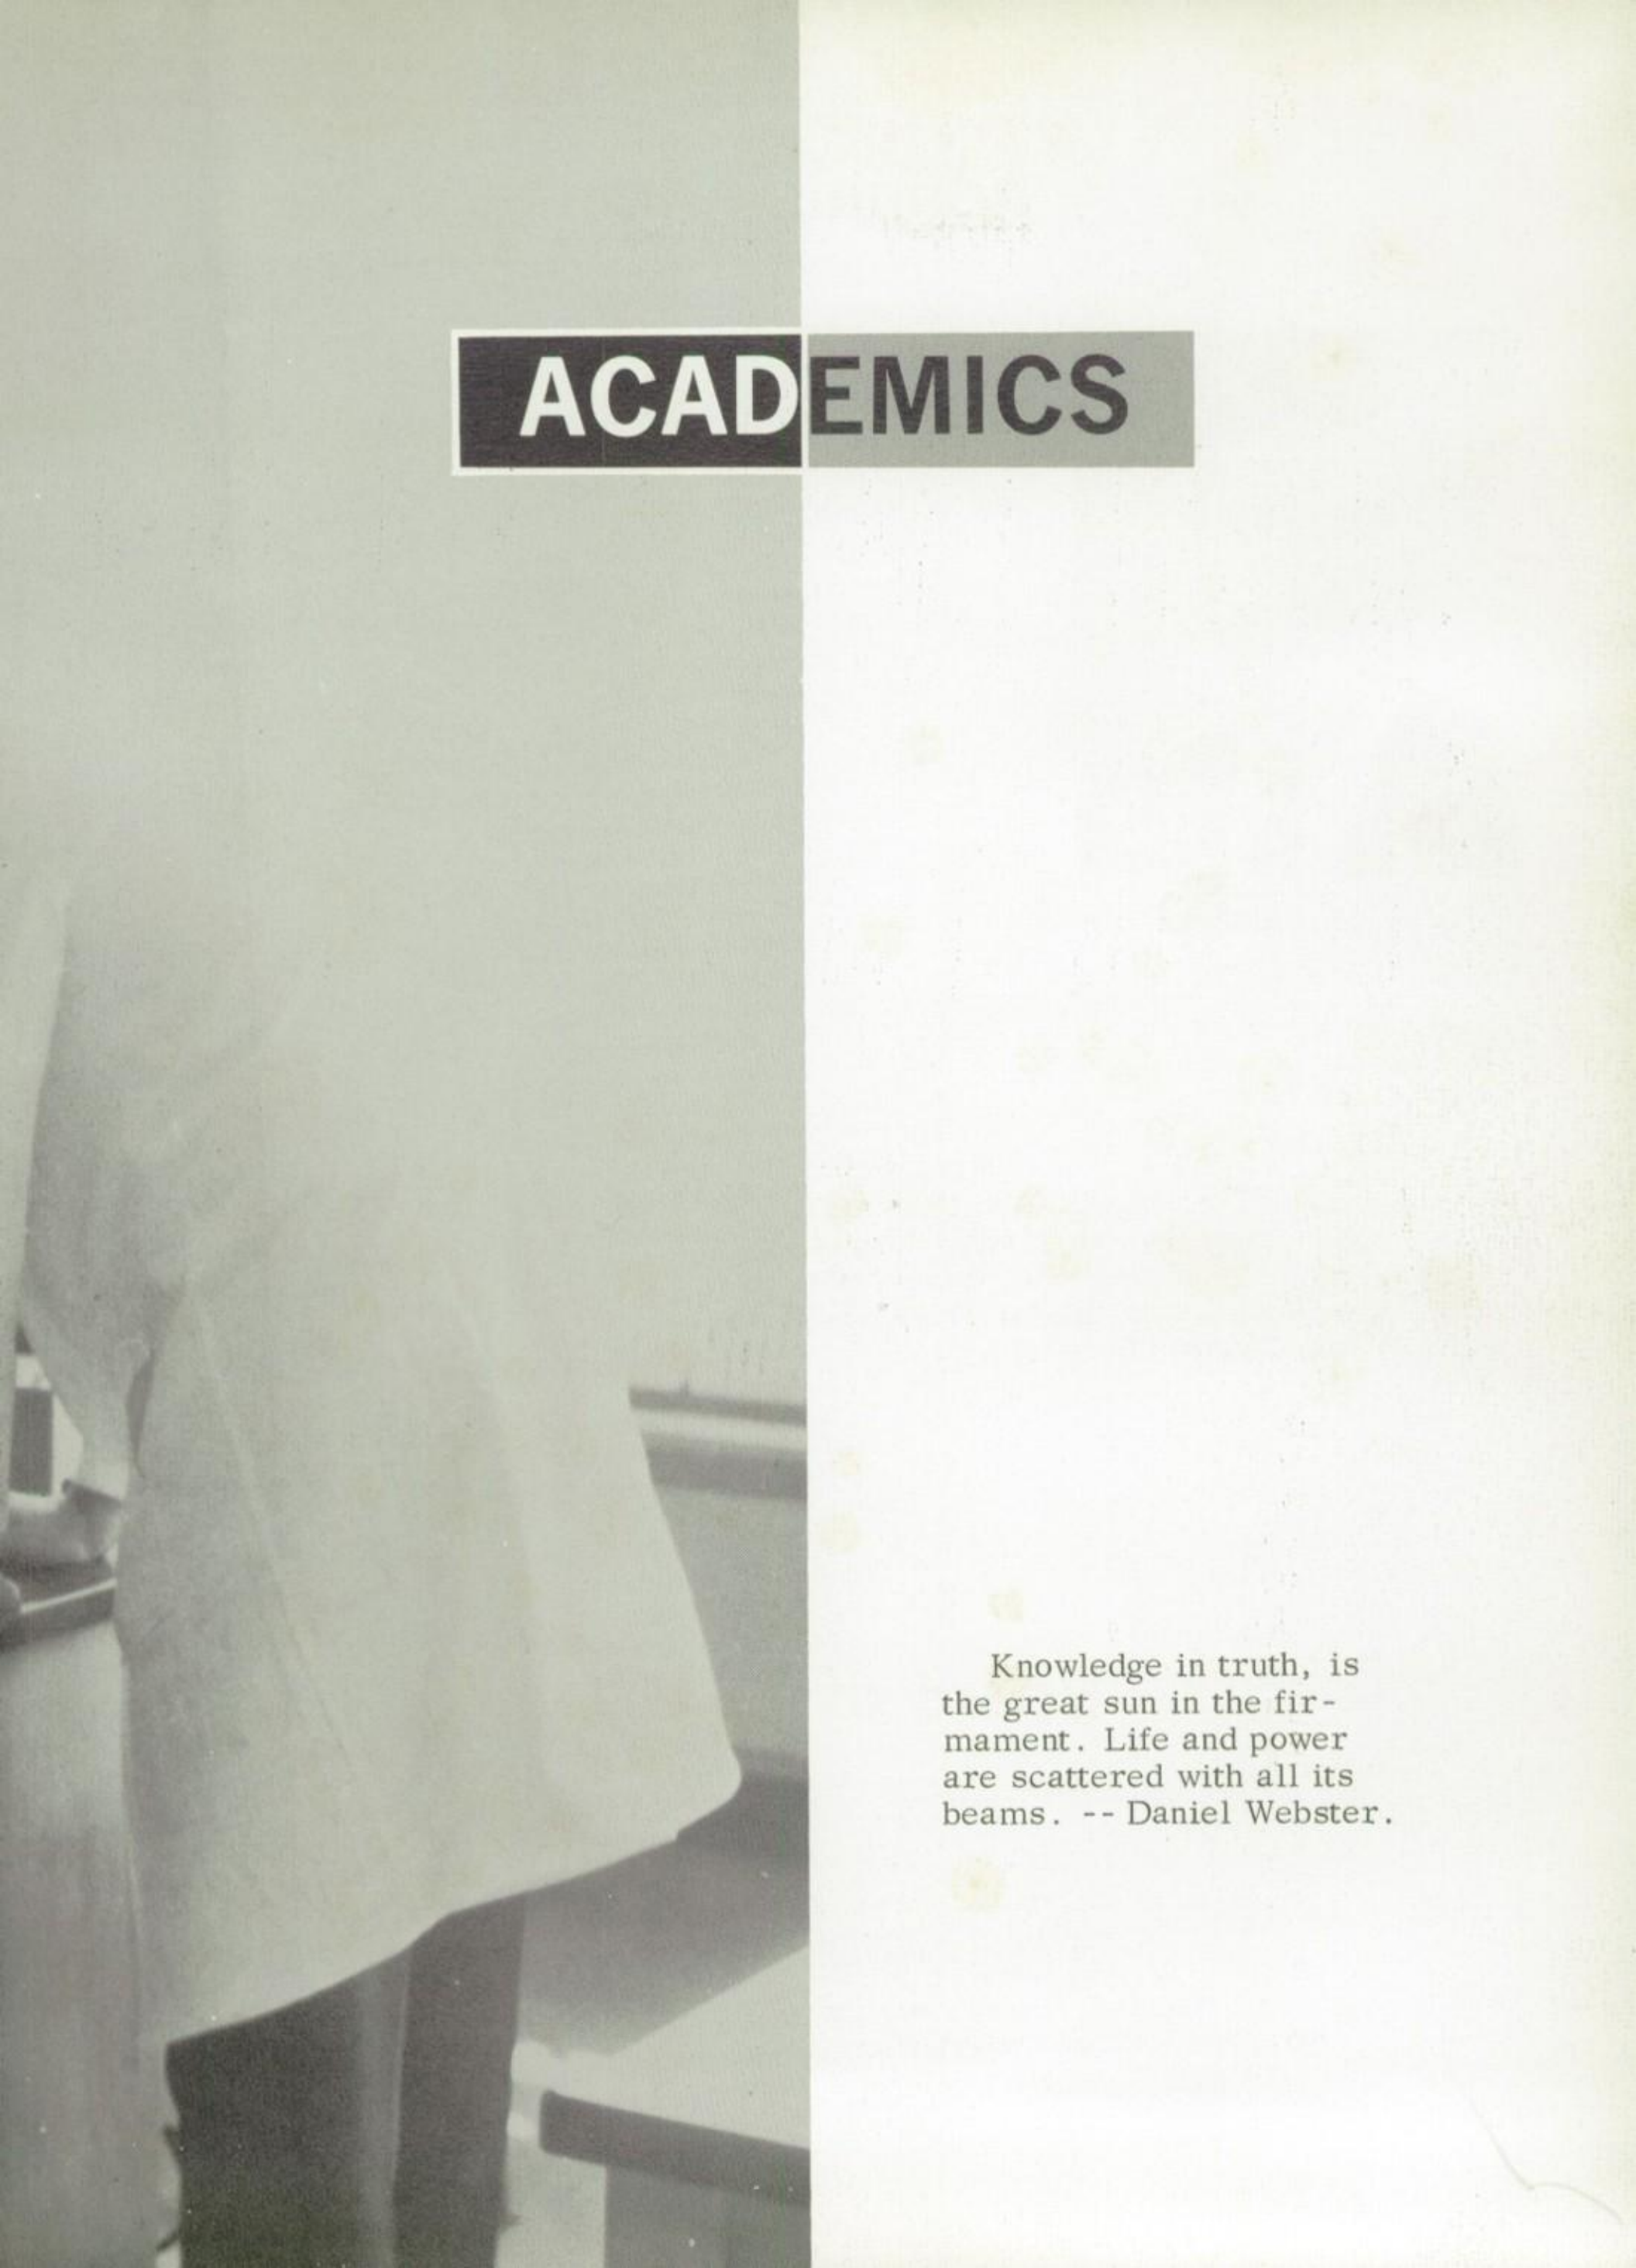

Graduation will be for us a time of foresight. With diploma in hand, we will consider the opportunity and responsibility in the no longer distant future. Graduation will usher in a time for reflection: a prayerful moment to consider experiences -- the influences which have formed our character, and which will determine the kind of people we shall someday become.

Through our growing and learning years, our parents have given us much love and understanding. They have been with us in times of happiness as well as sorrow, of achievement as well as failure. They have given us their love, their values, their courage to withstand the misfortune and sadness which life sometimes brings. In vast importance, they have been an example -- an example which we shall follow in the times of uncertainty and decision in the years to come, when we shall all become members of society and the shapers of our world.

To our warm and loving parents we dedicate this year-book and hope that they may someday be as proud of us as we are of them.

ACADEMICS

Knowledge in truth, is the great sun in the fir-mament. Life and power are scattered with all its beams. -- Daniel Webster.

Administration

Dr. Yulo

Dr. Frank Yulo, in spite of his numerous duties as chief administrator of the Old Lyme School System, has found time to be interested and active in many of the social and athletic functions of the high school and to give sound advice on the students' undertakings.

Through a student's years, his principal remains someone to be feared and admired. As a man who embodies this image perfectly, Mr. Grover passes judgment, advice, and friendship to the scholars of his school.

Mr. Grover

Board of Education

The Old Lyme Board of Education maintains and improves the quality and variety of education for the children of Old Lyme. It actively concerns itself with the orderly and proper planning of the additional school facilities.

The chairman is Mr. Stuart S. Adamson; Secretary, Mr. Walter Kennedy; and other Board members are Mr. Harry Cole, Mr. M. Henry Cole, Mrs. James Craven, Mr. Victor Morrison, Mr. Andrew Pfeiffer, Dr. Francis C. Roach, and Mr. John J. Speirs.

Mrs. Maddocks

If there is one person to whom we all turn, it is, indeed, Mrs. Gloria Maddocks, Mr. Grover's secretary. Not only does she maintain all legal records for the high school but she also manages, some how or other, with precision and punctuality, to type, mimeograph, file, and record incredible amounts of work from students and teachers. She is the friendly voice at this end of the phone, the pleasant smile that greets students who have problems and frustrations, and one of the key spectators at school games and functions.

We admire her and appreciate her because she has a personal interest in us and a personal obligation to us.

Mrs. Maddocks

Mr. Nichols

Guidance

Mr. James Nichols, Director of the Guidance Department, has the task of knowing each student individually and guiding him to solutions of his problems and aiding him in arriving at what his life's interest or work may be. One of his specific works is attempting to process senior college applications on time or shortly thereafter.

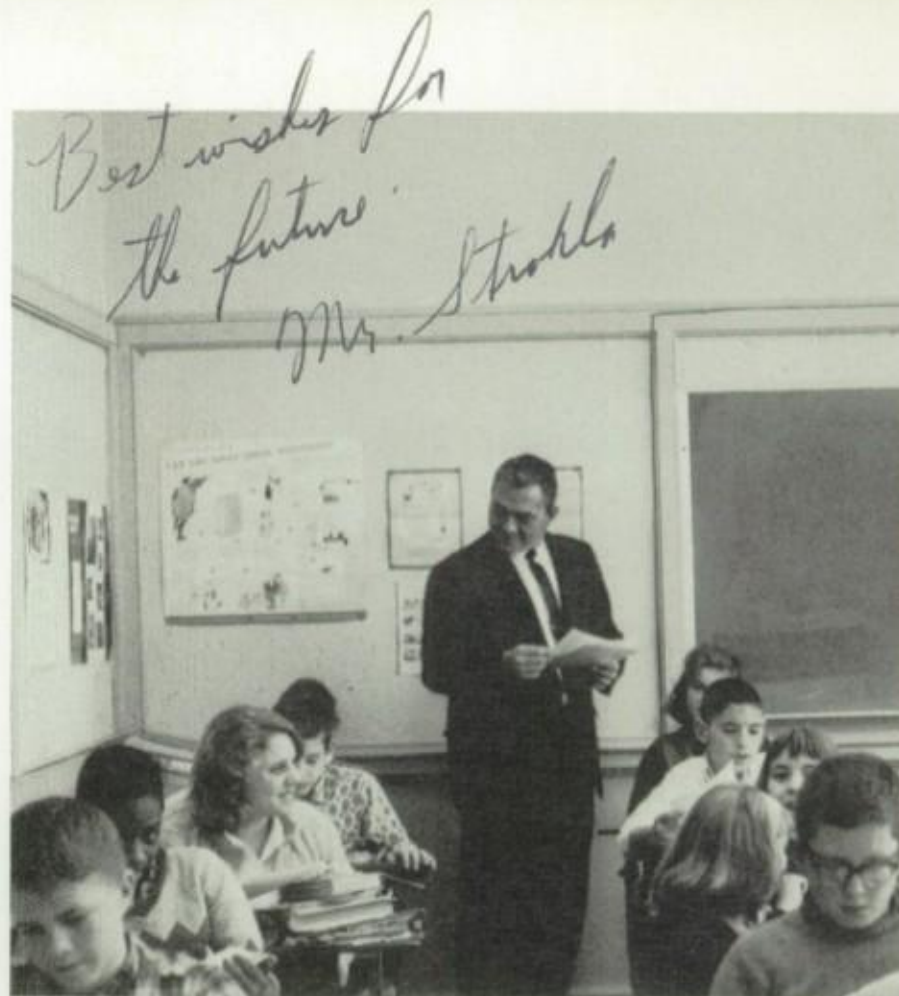

English

Mrs. Knowles, etc.

English is a language spoken universally, and it is said to be one of the most difficult in the world. This is especially true if you have been speaking it all your life. Nothing is more confusing than to walk into Junior High English and be required to learn HOW you have been speaking your native tongue. The High School concentrates on further chaos by teaching WHY you talk the way you do. It also strives to embellish your early grammar school reading, spelling, and writing techniques with "delightful" novels, undefinable vocabulary words, and composition upon composition. During the last year the teachers add the final straw (or ton of straws) with parallel readings, oral reports, and book reviews -- all intricately arranged so that one of them is due approximately every fifteen days.

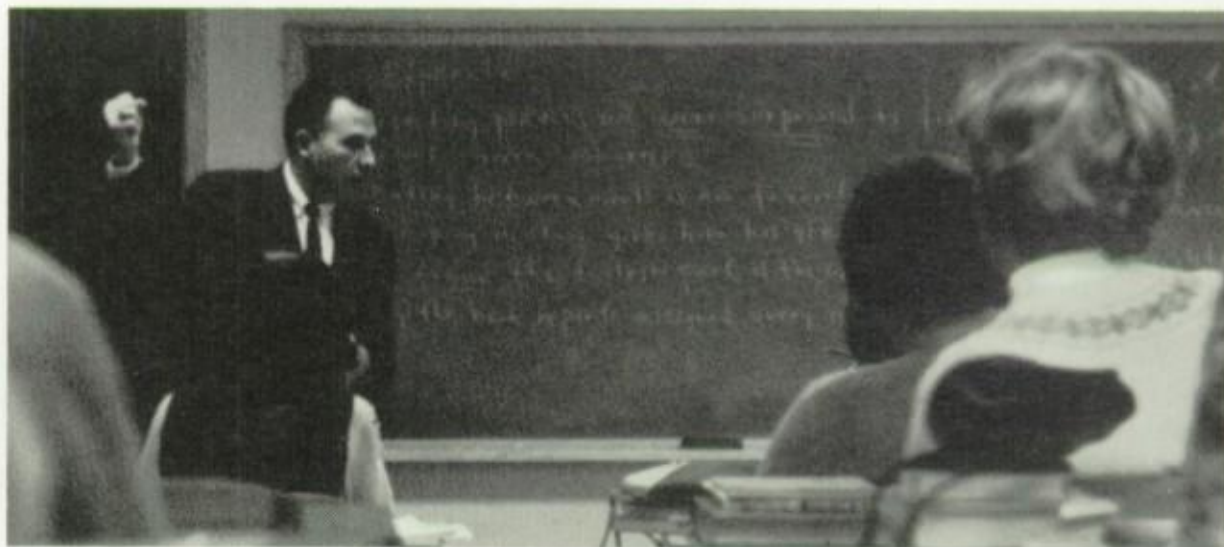

All this, combined with diagramming, term papers, and tests, is enough to make a student murmur sadly, "It's all Greek to me!"

Mr. Strohla, et. al.

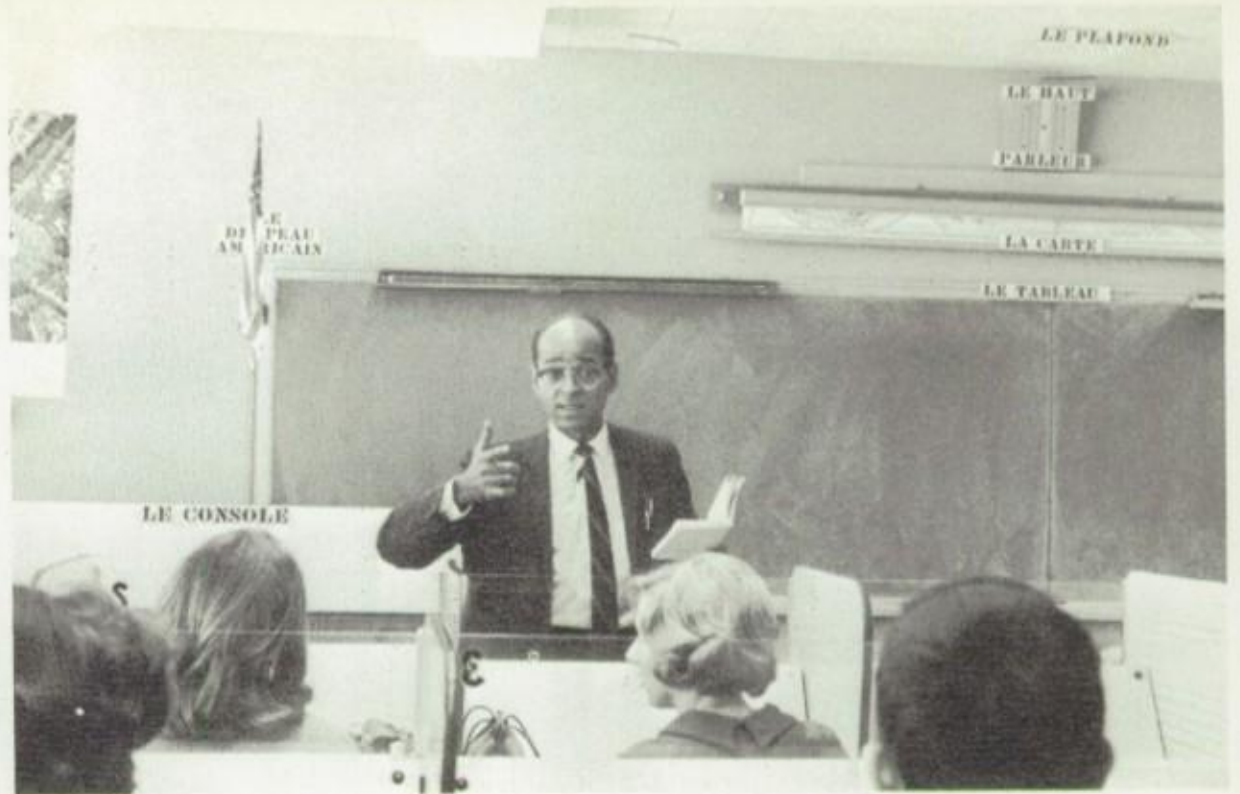

Miss Pollock in thought

Mr. Norris -- in action!

Mr. Bissett: a perspective

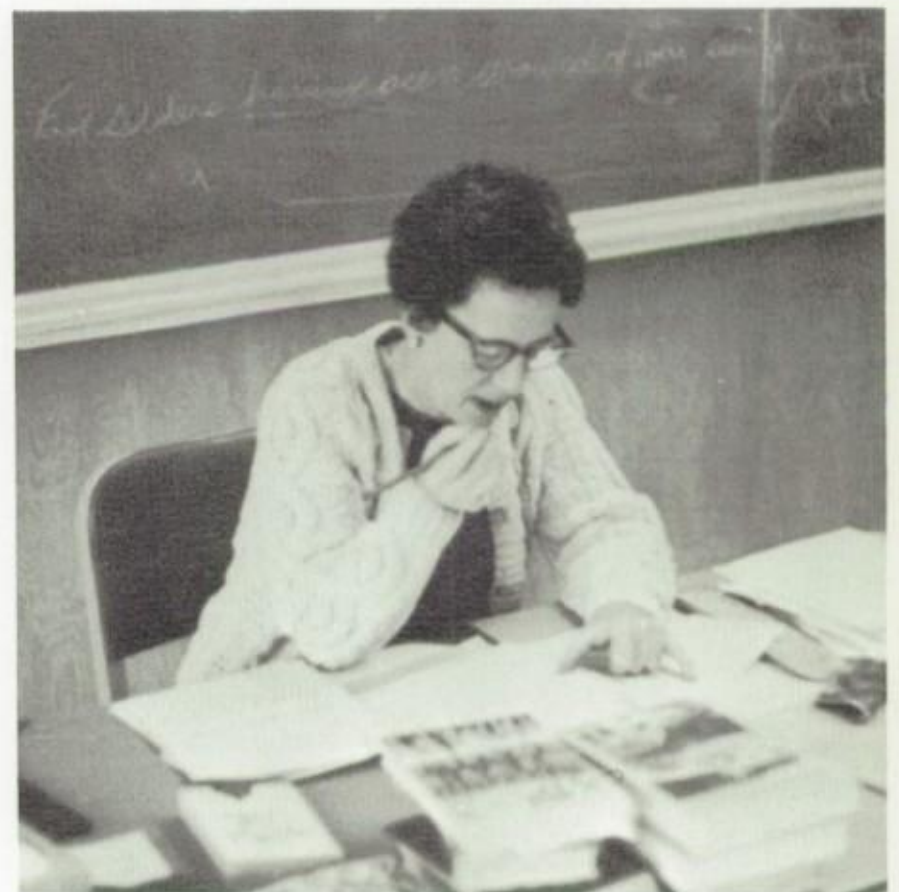

Monsieur Chappelle: a feeling of the language

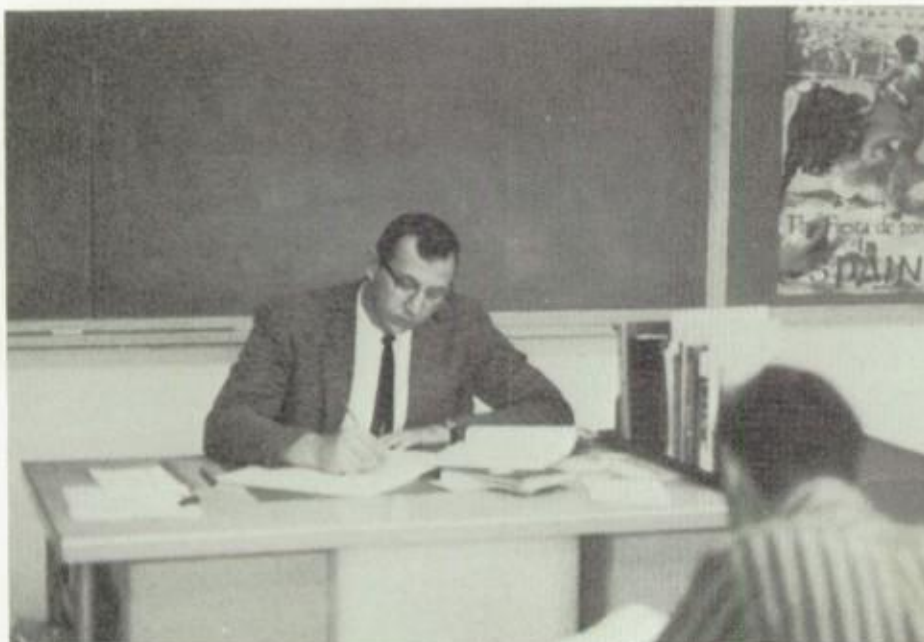

Pour apprendre la langue de "la douce France," on emploie le laboratoire de langues qui est souvent en démarche. Les oreilles douloureuses et les cheveux aplatis sont caractéristiques des étudiants de français. Mains étudiants de la première année de français font long feu graduellement, laissant un petit nombre de survivants qui luttent bravement pour atteindre la connaissance convoitée de la littérature française.

His, haec, hoc, huius, huius, huius, -- Latin is indeed a dead language, in spite of Mrs. Knowles' lively classes.

Un año nuevo, dos profesores nuevos, y los tiempos mismos viejos. Es el segundo año que Old Lyme High ha oyendo el lengua de España en sus edificios, Y día después de día, los estudiantes bregan con el presente, el pretérito, y el subjuntivo pavor.

Mrs. Knowles: pensive moment

Señor Guarnaccia: correction in red

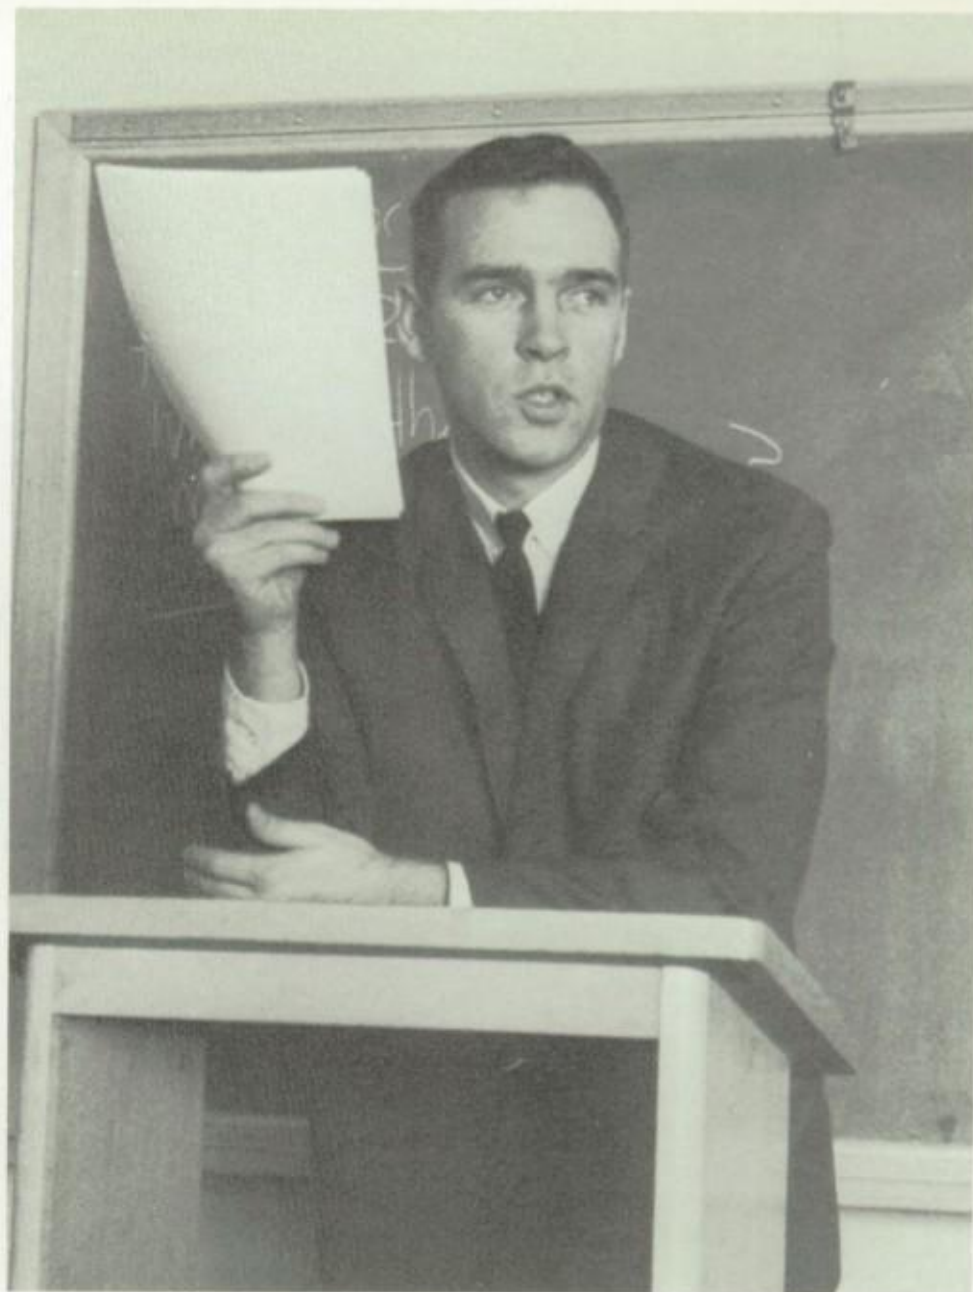

Languages

Social

Studies

Students and aids

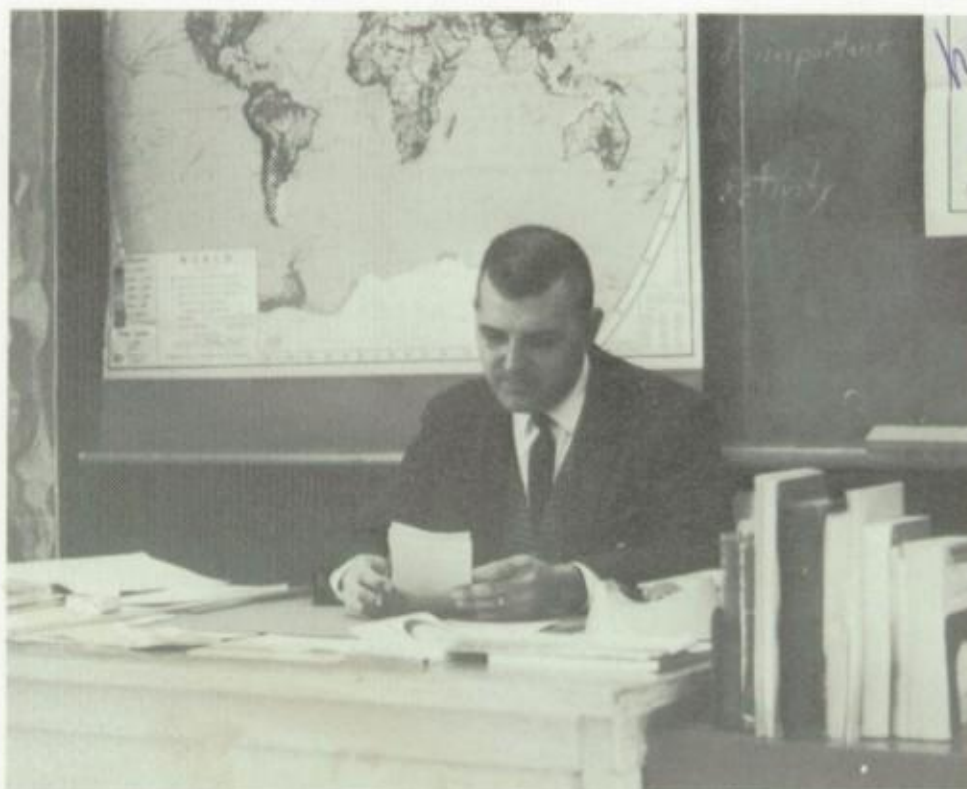

Mr. LaCasse: a serious moment?

The studious Mr. Hage

"During that particular period of time" of our ancestors, history was the same except there wasn't quite as much of it to learn. Even though there are movies, cartoons, records, and raised maps to make it more interesting, it is still a chore to pull an "A" in this rapidly changing course. A student is never quite sure that his current event report will be current by the time he has written it.

Mr. Mizak and his maps

*I've enjoyed having you as a student this year.
Good luck.
Mr. Mizak*

Mathematics

Mr. Custer: that certain smile

New trends, brighter hope, same frustration. What's new besides New York and New Hampshire? Well it's math. You don't think so! Then take a listen! Did you ever hear of integral rational functions, derivatives, asymptotes of hyperbola, synthetic division, parametric equations, latus rectum of ellipse?

We do include the easier types; i.e., medians, discriminants, co-functions, multiplication, and concaves.

$$\cos C = \frac{a^2 + b^2 - c^2}{2ab}$$

Mr. Caouette: the time spent in correction

Mr. Wojcik: point counterpoint

$$\frac{a-b}{a+b} = \frac{\tan \frac{1}{2}(A-B)}{\tan \frac{1}{2}(A+B)}$$

I hope you continue to have fun with math this year in H.A. the effort you put in this year in H.A. has been short in next year in H.A. Have fun Mr. Wojcik

Sciences

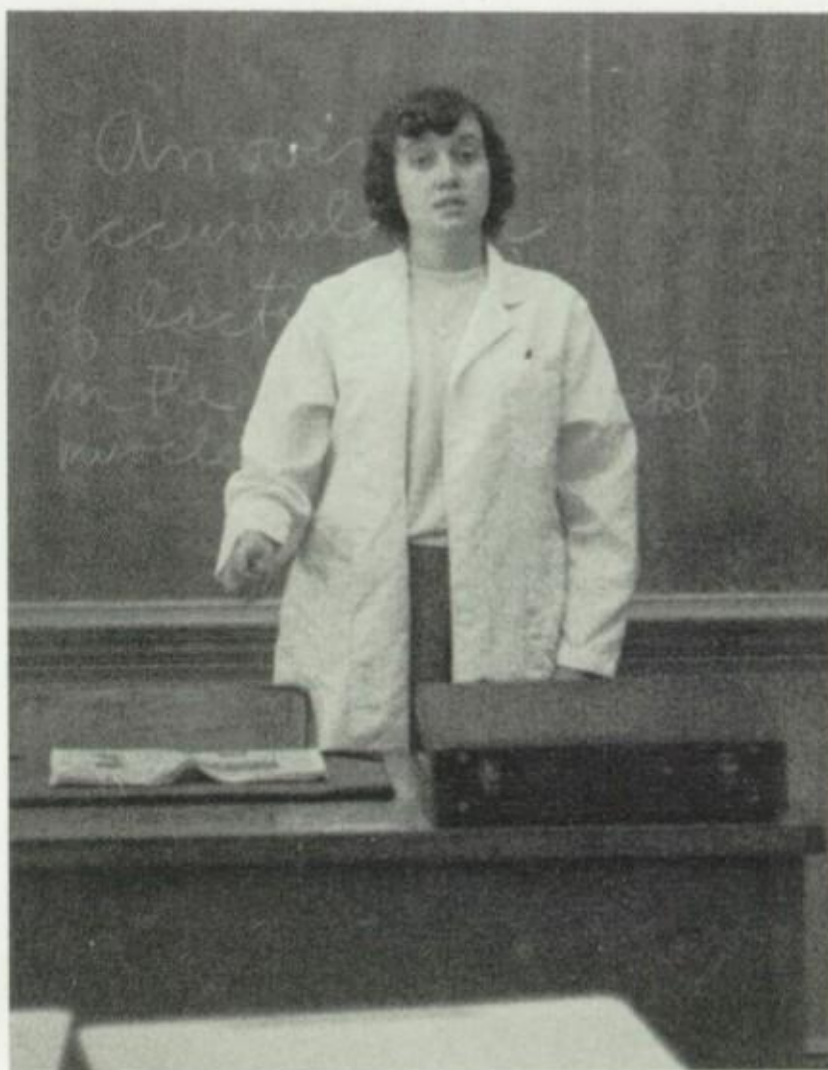

Mr. Barnes: anticipation

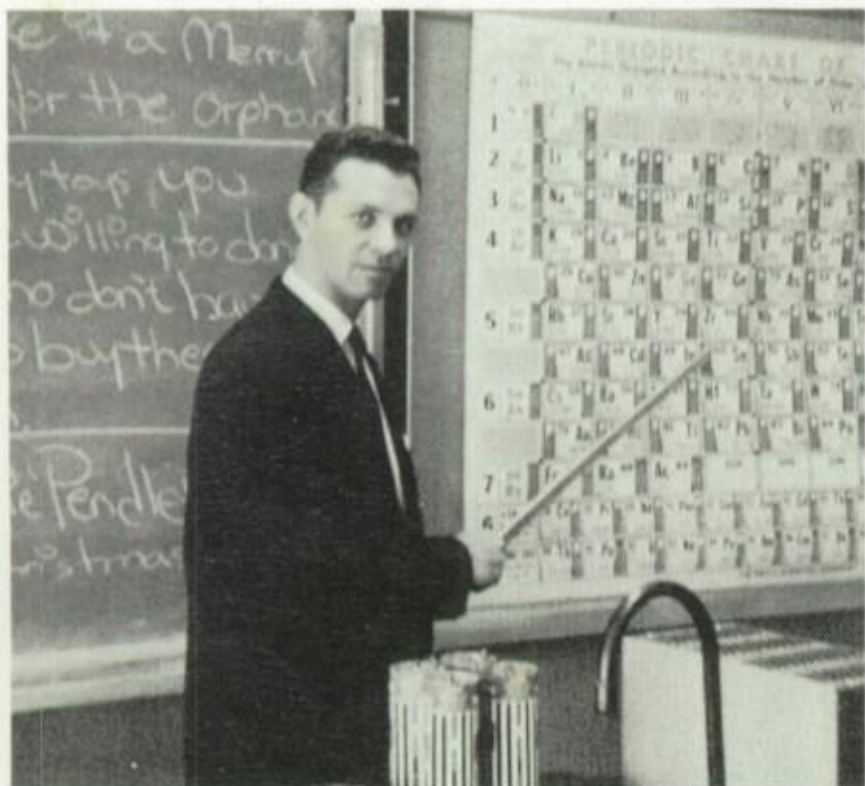

$$s/\text{sec} = v_i + 1/2a (2t - 1 \text{ sec})$$

Student: the early collection

Mrs. Pollak: from the top

Mr. Studzinski: chart and mind

The wonderful world of wonder in science causes us to wander willy-nilly through the areas of general studies wherein we received the introduction to science, meander through the development of the world in Earth Science, scamper here and yon in the pursuit of life, etc. in Biology, wade and waddle through various compounds, mixtures and tables in Chemistry, and plough and plod through the "laws of the universe" in that desirous and delightful study of Physics.

Home Economics

Mrs. Swan: point of view

Home Economics to some is the most old-fashioned, unchanging course in a school curriculum. This is true to some extent, for the modern housewife has only to crack a tube against the table top and her cookies pop onto cookie sheets. Her automatic dishwasher rolls into the dining room, and the dishes jump off the table into the machine. For dinner, she pulls out a three-course meal from the freezer and cooks it for a designated time.

Student homemakers, on the other hand, actually learn the art of canning home-grown vegetables, baking cookies from scratch, planning well-balanced meals, and matching thread and buttons to buttonless shirts.

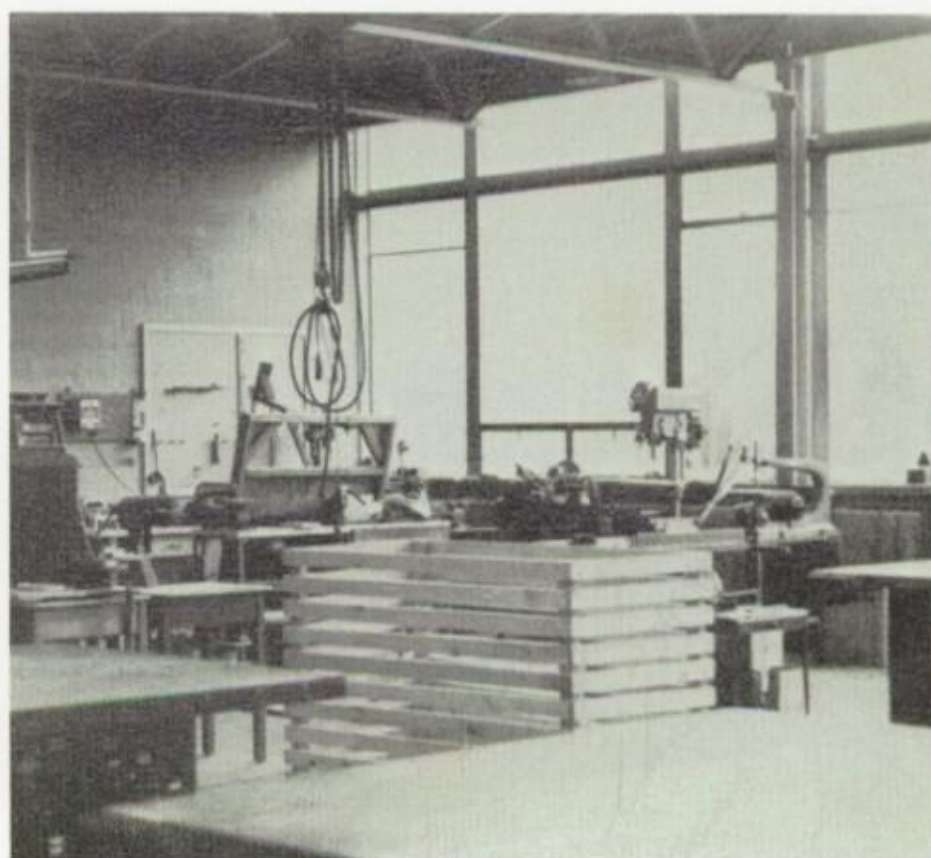

The intoxicating aroma of heavily seasoned spaghetti sauce and burned apple strudel may move a man's stomach, if not his heart. By the end of a year, however, the well-dressed student homemakers are able to turn out some mouth-watering dishes.

Mr. Kotzan: the measurements

Anyone can smash his thumb, but few can turn a square block of wood into a round bowl (with finesse). The hammering and sawing sounds coming from the shop may only be a student's mind reviewing the fundamentals of simple and power-driven machines, drafting a revolutionary architectural design, or sleeping.

Industrial Arts

The quiet, clean shop: the end of the day

Commercial Department

Miss Sanford:
the essence of time

Form, language, co-ordination? Future secretaries must be able to correct their bosses' grammatical errors, decipher between the spoken it's and its, and know the punctuation and accepted form of business letters. Stenography, a language in itself, comes in handy not only in business but also in classes taught by fast-talking teachers. Typing can almost be a sport for those unco-ordinated students who can compete in words per minute.

One way to get the word

Library

The library, the home of the reserve shelves is in spite of those loathsome volumes, one of the most popular places in the school. Mrs. Harding, the librarian, somehow keeps her head in the midst of pink passes, blue passes, white detention slips, and answering students' requests for interesting books. The true test of her endurance is Friday's sixth period gossip session.

Mrs. Harding:
the characteristics of a book

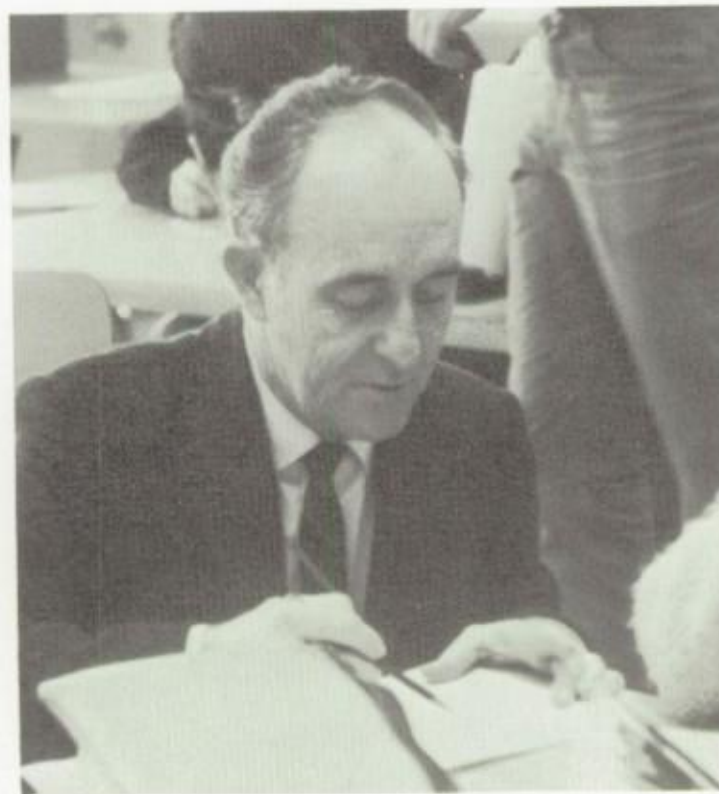

Music

History has been made in music! High school students are now able to appreciate music appreciably in Music Appreciation. And we are all able to appreciate the humor and talent of the boys in the newly formed Boys' Glee Club. Mr. Mellinger certainly has his hands full. It should be interesting to see who fares better in school assemblies -- the Chorus, Boys' Glee Club, Band, or Mr. Mellinger.

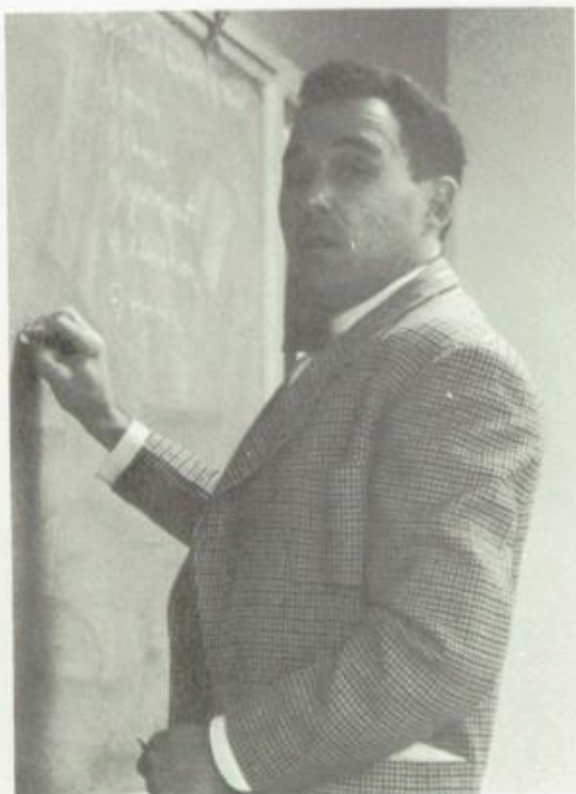

Mr. Mellinger . . . and a one . . . and a two . . .

Art

Mr. Bissett: a point of direction

With paper, pencil, paint and brush, the students in Mr. Joseph Bissett's art classes combine learning, practice, pleasure, and creativity.

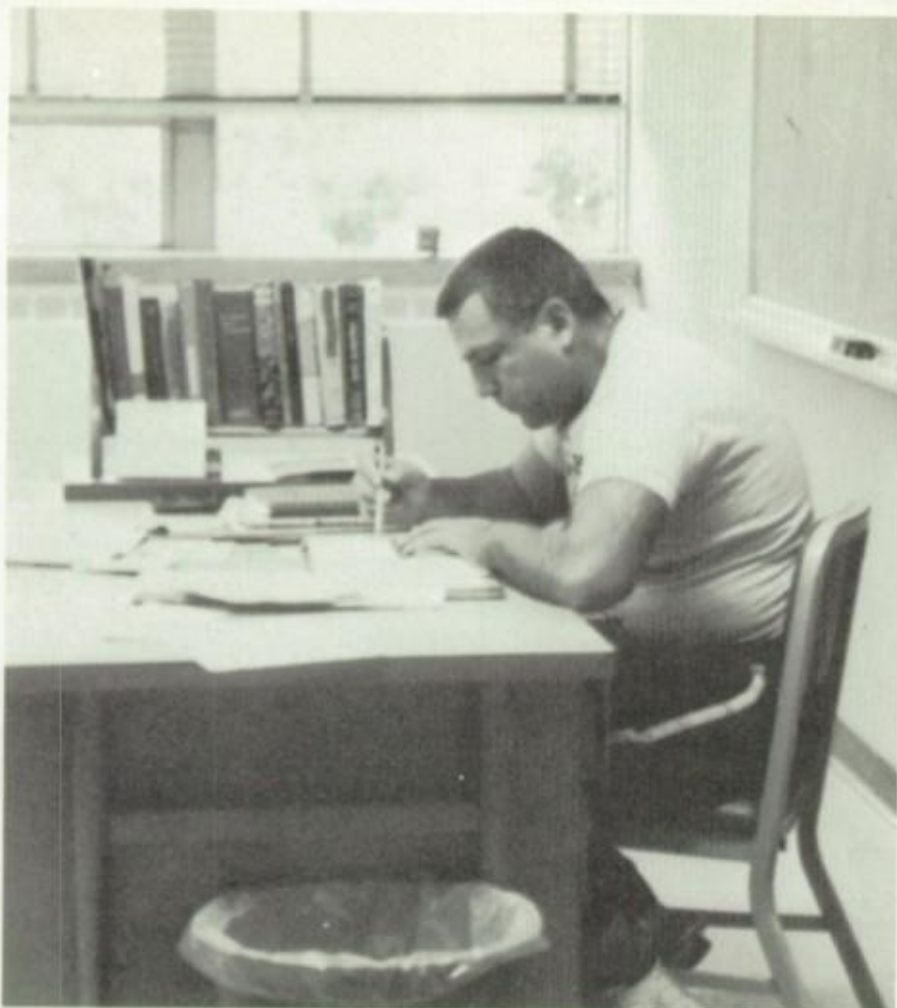

Mr. Norris: explication!

Public Speaking

Publicly speaking, this course trains students to speak publicly. The chief speaker is Mr. Norris, who emphasizes the need for experience in formal and informal speech.

At least once a week, students are marked on the way they talk; however, this evaluation does not include their most natural performances: whispering in class, endless conversations on the telephone, and gossip sessions.

Mr. Gardner: paper work

Fifty or one hundred situps on an unsuspecting stomach result in agonized laughter for the next two days, as our muscles are tormented, then molded into condition. Ten minutes of exercises, followed by fun and games make up the strenuous, body building gym classes.

Physical Education

Miss Manning: spotting

School Nurse

With a thermometer in his mouth and a hand on his head, the sick student listens to Mrs. Peterson's lively conversation and her all-important decision -- "You may (may not) go home."

Pain?

Mrs. Bowers

Custodians

With her faithful can of "Bab-O," "Tomi" is more than a sink-scrubber or a milk-ticket-puncher; she is a genuine Ann Landers. Only our "Tomi" is willing to listen to everyone's problems, to offer her shoulder for a crying pillow, and give much needed advice.

Broken locker? Spilled milk? Don't cry over it -- call Mr. Ward. Handy with mop, dust cloth, and broom, he is the phantom of the halls.

The boys and girls of the freshman class have entered into the rigor of high school life: the opportunity to select a more "personal" curriculum, to engage in sports representing OLHS, to become a major cog in our school's machinery. They too are now a vital factor in the distinction of her caliber.

Wise and Foolish

Well on their way towards earning that ever-envied diploma, the tenth grade has displayed an excellence in scholastic ability, as well as making ample contribution to athletic and other extracurricular activities. It has been a job well done, and we leave with the hope that their interest and energy shall not wane in their last two years.

Studious, indeed?

Juniors

Nothing worthwhile in life is ever easily achieved. Yet when we look back on those "so much more immature and ludicrous" juniors of not so long ago, we are happily surprised to discover that it is they who are soon to be the seniors of OLHS.

Not only will they have attained the distinction of a name, but also the respect and admiration of every underclassman as well. They have reached a top rung in the ladder of life's education -- many more are still to be sought, but certainly this is a special milestone.

"Never do today what you can put off 'til tomorrow" was the motto of this year's Lymen staff. Amazingly enough, it seemed to work. With weeks before pages were due, staff members haggled over minute details and major decisions. As the deadline closed in, all literary work was entirely rewritten, pages completely rearranged, and the book was nearly made over. Weeks of fighting and arguing seemed wasted. All work on the second deadline was left until just three weeks remained. Knowing exactly what had to be done, experienced members sat down with determination to finish the book. One caution the staff leaves to next year's members if they find themselves following the same motto -- no tomorrows follow deadlines!

Student Council

Operating under a new Constitution, the Student Council this year abolished all traditional social functions and began work on projects to benefit the school, community, state, and nation.

Early in the school year, a Get-Acquainted Dance was held for all students, but especially for the seventh graders and new freshmen from Lyme. In November, all senior high students took part in Career Day and attended the lectures of their choice on various professions.

For a Christmas project, members of the Council, both singers and monotones, traveled to Middletown Hospital to sing carols to the patients.

With February came Bundle Week, the annual clothing drive for the Appalachian region. Future plans of the Council included the formation of a fund for a Foreign Exchange Student Program and an organized Field Day: something to liven up the last agonizing days before graduation.

National Honor Society

Twelve new members, one lone male in the midst of eleven female classmates, were tapped into the National Honor Society at the first induction on December 11, 1964. No time was wasted. New members immediately joined the experienced in sponsoring a tea for the upperclassmen and alumni of Old Lyme, and the bolder members promptly took their turns leading morning exercises over the public address system. Every Friday afternoon, members went into Waterford to Seaside Regional Center to help take care of and feed the children.

Plans were made for the first time to hold a second induction in the spring, but speaking for that solitary male member, I would say the Society has a pleasant male-female ratio as it stands.

Lyme Light

Lyme Light, the school's newspaper, got off to two clean starts this year, and in spite of the mixup, has managed to go to press each month. Early in the fall, the staff published its first photograph, and in January, a new column was added especially for the lovelorn of Old Lyme High. Who knows? "Venus" popularity may develop into a Lonely Hearts Club.

Gallery, the school's literary magazine, showed great talent, not only in the field of writing composition, but also in the ability to type neatly and to staple pages together, in order. Tremendous improvements have been made in the appearance of the paper which, with the students' imaginative articles, is a magazine that few could criticize. By the way, what did you say an okapi was?

This year's group of amateur actors and actresses were really hams. Can you imagine strutting around on a stage acting like a bunch of sweet, senile old spinsters, one of whom has committed two murders for love? Can you imagine it?

Neither could Mr. Chappelle until the "Bull" was turned loose on many unsuspecting viewers at 8:00 p.m. Friday, February 5, and again the next night!

Played on a checker board with tiny carved dolls, chess is one of the few games that requires only the use of the tissues between the ears and the movements of one hand, right or left; it makes no difference.

In chess as in true life, the kings relax in their protected castles while their imaginative queens scheme and invent wicked, unexpected plays to capture the opposing royalty. Any false move may mean the fair queen's death and woe to the wifeless king. The enemy closes in swiftly, surely, crushing the walls of the castle, chasing the abandoned monarch to eventual checkmate.

Home Economics Club

The Home Economics Club was organized this year by several senior high girls, solely for the purpose of helping other organizations. Although the members had been meeting only a short time, several projects were immediately undertaken. Old toys were repainted, oiled, and put together for the children at Cromwell Orphanage during the Christmas season and, in the spring, students joined in the drive for the March of Dimes. It is a worthwhile club, but unfortunately not open to confirmed bachelors and future husbands.

Mrs. Swan, advisor; B. Stanhope, C. Kennison, C. Ames, M. Pendleton, G. MacDonald, R. Czikowsky, B. Garvin.

A library without librarians is like a book without pages. That is why the Library Club was formed -- to assist in the care and preservation of the school's treasury of books, and to give future librarians a taste of the intellectual dust. The artistic members put international events, book titles and themes, seasons of the year, important people and places, and a few thumbtacks together on colorful backgrounds to present perhaps the most decorative and informative bulletin board found anywhere in the school.

FTA

The Future Teachers of America Club has both junior and senior high members. Their main task is doing what every other student does naturally, except that they do it with expectations of constructive results. Their reactions to a teacher's methods of drilling knowledge into heads of lead are not simply unwarranted complaints, but attempts to learn from his mistakes and to benefit from his many good points.

As some of the members are discovering for the first time, there is much more to teaching than making a seating chart and assigning parallel readings.

SEATED: D. Fazzina, D. Pfeiffer, D. Bugbee, P. Speirs, M. Boyd, J. Husch, D. Hayden, C. White, S. Sutter, P. Ryan, C. Zuk. ROW 1: A. Sisk, J. Supik, M. Guitar, C. Corsino, M. Roberts, R. Fatone. Fencing Club

En garde! Amateur musketeers took up swords this year for the first time as an organized club with no malice intended. Both junior and senior high students tackled the sport which sometimes appeared to bystanders to be a cross between pin the sword on the nearest tail and dodge the flashing steel.

Formed to promote good sportsmanship and to abolish such things as booing during foul shots, the Varsity Club consists of only those MALES who have won a letter in sports, regardless of the amount of time spent picking up splinters from the bench.

An ambitious group, it hopes to introduce in the future a point system which would eventually be used in classroom activities as well as in sports. In the meantime, the members and non-members continue to wonder about the old saying -- "It's not whether you win or lose; it's how you play the game."

Ski Club

With the reports of promises for a snowy winter, several Old Lyme students, with and without skis, formed the Wildcat Ski Club. Once a week meetings are held to plan activities and to acquaint beginners with ski equipment.

Thus far all plans, including an outing to Powder Hill Ski Area and an afternoon at a John Jay Ski Movie, have had a poor attendance due to the weatherman's accurate predictions -- nine snowy week-ends. Like true skiers, members welcomed the forty inches of powder but with one major disappointment -- town roads were cleared long before Monday and school-time came around.

Glee Club and Choruses

Who would believe it? A mixed junior high chorus while high school students insist on individual all-girl and all-boy choruses. But at least, Old Lyme has come one step farther and broken the age old belief that singing is for girls only. Maybe in a few years, the Boys' Glee Club and Girls' Chorus will merge and then, once again, the law stating that opposites attract will be proven.

Band and Majorettes

The majorettes had blisters on their big toes, but the band played on. Senior graduates walked out laughing and crying while the band played on. Students slumbered through assemblies and still the band played on. During X-period, every Tuesday, the members of the band tuned up, kept one eye on their conductor, and, with the signal, began tooting in preparation for their performances.

In spring the majorettes, twirling their batons in various stunts, joined in leading the musicians around the school grounds -- a pleasant distraction for all study hall students.

"Blow, blow, blow the man down."

Our fearless leader.

Old Lyme "Twisters"

Tom 'n Jim

Return of the native.

The soccer goalposts always seem to be in the wrong place at the wrong time. Either they are too far apart, too close, too high, too low, or waver too much in the slightest breeze.

The soccer ball has similar problems. Atmospheric conditions affect the height and degree of bounces and the curvature of the ball as it soars through the air. Differences in the soggianness of the ground, whether mud puddles or drought conditions exist, determine the slipperiness of the ball's surface.

The soccer player, however, has only one problem or purpose in the game; that is, with the use of cleated feet, he must direct the ball into and through the goalposts, after having taken into consideration all the outside forces. A simple task, until forty-two other feet are placed on the field, kicking up dirt too. This lessens the chances for a perfect goal considerably.

But Old Lyme discovered at Wethersfield, in a tense, tournament game against Litchfield, (any girl with fingernails bit them to the bone) that the soccer player reigns supreme over any goalposts or lopsided, bounceless balls. With perfect timing and coordination, Old Lyme's soccer players conquered all the opposing forces and gave a powerful boot, smashing the ball off the goalpost and over the goalie into the goal cage, ending the game victoriously for Old Lyme.

A look of expectation.

"Courage, man courage!"

"Please, mother, I'd rather do it myself!"

Fore!

"It's my turn!"

Field Hockey

Thud . . . crack! Thud . . . crack! Thud . . . crack! And the game is on. Wood on wood, wood on ball, wood on bone -- bruises, bruises, bruises! Such is the game of field hockey. A harmless game until it turns to hackey and a wild form of golf. Old Lyme has been lucky -- only yellow bruises, black eyes, blue bruises, sprained ankles, purple bruises, stubbed toes, and occasionally wounded pride.

This year the boys managed to arrange their wins and losses to obtain maximum tension and excitement at the end of the season. The gym was papered with "To the Tournament" and "Go Wildcats," and Mr. LaCasse tore his hair as the team squeezed into the playoffs despite injuries, fouls, and other mishaps.

Dawdling or dribbling?

"Did he or didn't he?"

"I'm going to take my ball and go home."

Girls' Basketball

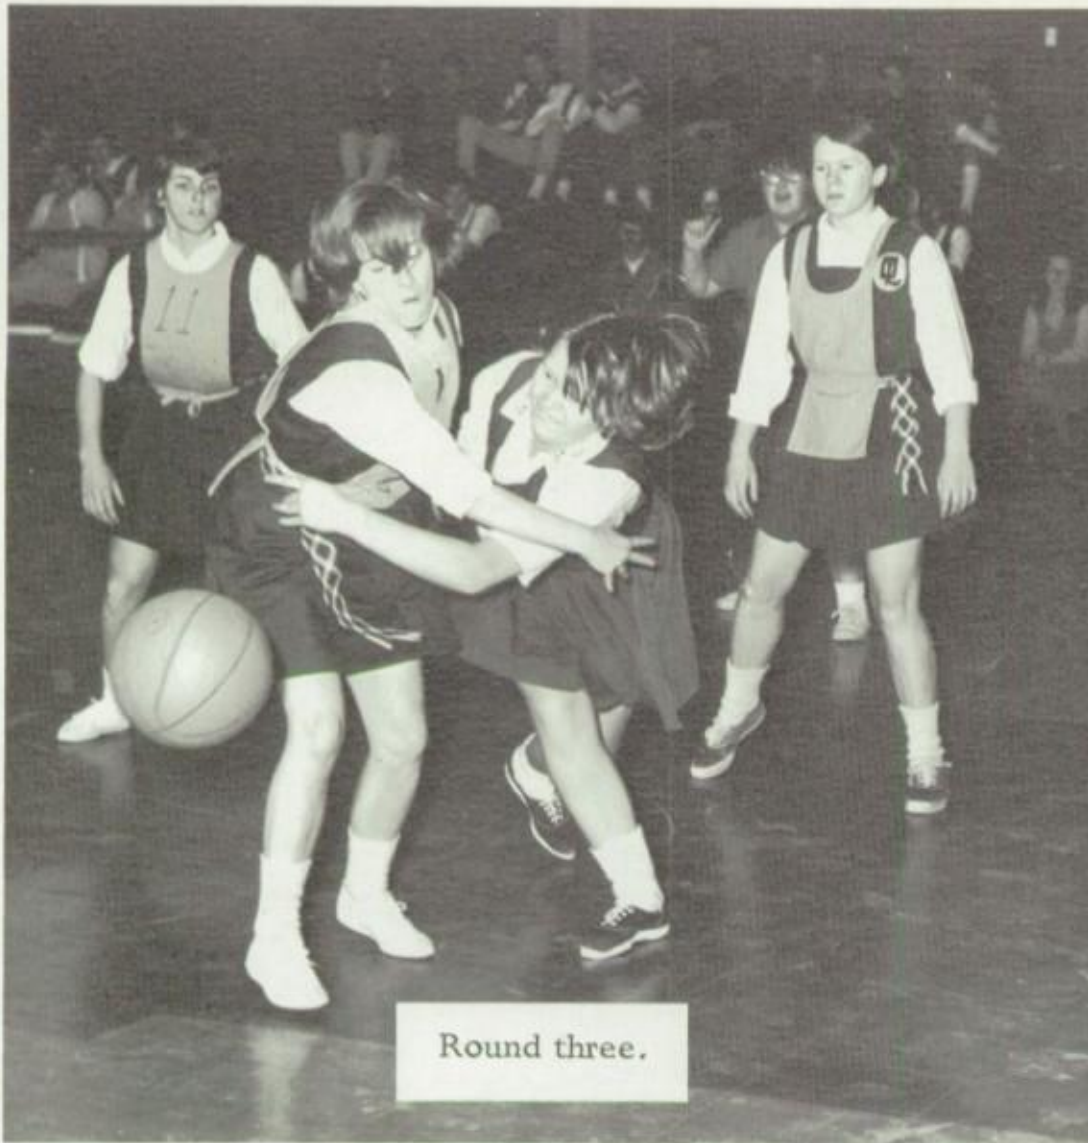

In spite of their peculiar problems (keeping hairdos intact, finding a "flattering" tunic, etc.) the team has done well in their efforts to make a name for Old Lyme in girls' basketball.

The senior players have made their last season a memorable one with a record of six wins and two losses.

Cheerleaders

Ranging from a petite four foot nine and one half to a majestic five foot nine, this year's cheerleaders must have had some difficulty arranging intricate patterns to suit the wide differences in height. But "rain, hail, lightening, thunder, Old Lyme's faithfuls made no blunder" and even came up with many catchy, original chants that sparked the team and spectators on to victory.

"Ashes, ashes . . ."

Subtle encouragement.

Baseball

One little, two little, three little basemen. Four little, five little, six little outfielders. Seven little, eight little, nine altogether. Ten including the coach -- that is Old Lyme's baseball team, on the warpath, catching pops, pitching strikes, scoring runs, swinging bats, and making outs, but always ready to bury the hatchet with the opposing team, win or lose.

Casey does it again!

Congratulations

The illustration shows a black mortarboard cap with a tassel hanging from its right side. Below the cap is a rolled-up diploma tied with a ribbon bow.
